

4 CAMPUS FRATERNITIES GO NATIONAL

THE LAMBDA CHI HOUSE, formerly known as Schiott Hall, was purchased by SLX fraternity for $21,000 from the University immediately after they were given permission to go national. Former residence counselor, Mrs. May Lewis, was told by the fraternity that she could remain, but only as a roomer.

by Meyer Kelly

Beer parties, cocktail parties, social hours, happy hours, and many other variations of parties, hours and orgies were held last week in celebration of four University fraternities who were given permission to go national.

The four fraternities that received their charters and recognition as nationals were: Sigma Lambda Chi, Alpha Gamma Phi, Omega Sigma Rho, and Sigma Omicron Sigma.

The weeklong festivities, which started last Sunday and continued until the following Saturday morning, featured block dances on Park place, beer parties at Seaside park, cocktail parties at the Lambda Chi house, (formerly Schiott Hall) and students running naked through the streets.

Sirens from the Bridgeport police department's squad cars could be heard at all hours of the day and night during the week as they sped from one part of the campus to the other. Police battled with riot guns, tear gas and clubs as they broke up fights between members of the four fraternities who were fighting over which dormitory they wanted as their frat house.

When the celebration finally came to a close at the end of the week and the stench of stale beer could be smelled rising from the gutters where many of the fraternity men were laying, the Inter-Fraternity Council announced that victory was theirs after a nine year battle with the administration.

SLX purchased Schiott Hall from the University two days after they received their charter. Now known as the Lambda Chi House, members of that fraternity have taken over that dorm and so far 12 of their members have moved in.

Ed Clark, SLX president, said that the former Schiott residence counselor, Mrs. May Lewis, will remain there for a probationary period of 90 days. Clark said that most of her authority will be taken away and that she will live there as a resident only. He said she will be paying $40 a month for her room.

OSR president, Joe O'Brien announced just before press time that his fraternity has signed a contract to purchase Park Hall from the University. They expect to take over and have most of their members moved in by the middle of next week. Park Hall will be renamed Sigma Rho house. Dr. Herbert Glines, who is the present residence counselor, said that he expects to move into town as soon as he gets his notice from O'Brien.

AGP president Tracy Smith, stated that his fraternity is presently negotiating with the University for the purchase of Seaside Hall. Smith announced that his fraternity's national headquarters in St. Louis is willing to pay the University $23,000. The Board of Trustees will not settle for anything under $25,000. AGP's reason for buying Seaside Hall is that most of their members are living there now as dorm students and there would be little delay in moving in.

President of SOS, Roman Vio-lyn, was unavailable for comment about his fraternity's decision as to what dorm they would buy. The Bribe was able to contact Art Altman, SOS treasurer, who said they are still looking around. He said at the present they are having financial troubles with their national headquarters. But if they don't come through, they might drop their national standing and settle for the Bishop Annex.

The fraternities on campus have been battling with University officials for nine years to go national. "Fear of too much power" was the main reason the administration would not give in. They felt that if they allowed them to be nationals, they would acquire the same reputation as they have in other Universities. One University official pointed out as an example that at another college a fraternity got so powerful that they were instrumental in the firing of two very competent professors.

In giving the four fraternities permission to have national charters and to purchase dorms for frat houses, the administration said, "that if the secondary groups get too drunk with power, it will be the end of all fraternities, local and national."

HIGHLIGHTING THE WEEK long festivities was the slight misunderstanding between fraternity members and the police. After breaking up the fight with tear gas, riot guns and clubs, the cops were given two bottles of booze and went on their merry way to break up another fight.

Bribe's Lowest Scholar Boasts of 00.02 QPR

by Pasquale Rosenblatt

Maximilian Cavindish is the Bribe's low scholar of the week with a QPR of 00.02. A seventh semester freshman majoring in Physical Education, Max plans to graduate as soon as his ole man's dough runs out.

Graduating from reform school in 1949, Max entered the Arnold College of physical education the following year. He feels that the most challenging subject he has had since his arrival at the University was English A.

Maximilian Cavindish

Elected as the University's Ugly Man in 1950, Mr. Cavindish was also cited in Who's Who in American Universities in 1951. He has held the following offices: president of the freshman class, treasurer of the freshman class and recording secretary of the WAA (Women's Athletic Association) and is a member of the Russian Club.

Drafted in his second semester, the low scholar served in the infantry for three months. Two months of his Army service was spent in the stockade. Upon leaving the Army with an undesirable discharge, he returned to the University to continue his studies.

Max feels that his extra-curricular activities are of great benefit to his social life. As president of Theta Sigma, he stated that the common bond between his fellow fraternity brothers is something only to be desired by the lowly individual.

Rock 'n Roll is number one on the list for Max's musical likes. He stated his dislike for progressive jazz and classics is because "for one to enjoy this kind of music, one has to think." He said, "I have an extreme dislike for thinking."

The low scholar's favorite past-time is beating his head against the wall because it feels good when he stops.

"Maintaining almost a straight F average isn't as easy as it sounds" Mr. Cavindish said, "if it wasn't for a D that I got in advanced calculus 303, I would have had a 00.00 QPR."

Other pastimes of the Bribe's low scholar of the week, are reading (Mad Comics, Playboy, Bugs Bunny, and Little Orphan Annie) marble tournaments, (All state in '48) and the National Houla Hoop Grande Prix.

Ice Retains Pinkertons For Library

by Hymie Houllgan

Starting tomorrow, in order for anyone to steal a book from the library, he will have to be either a professional crook or an experienced shoplifter.

Mr. Lewis M. Ice, head librarian, announced that the Pinkerton Detective Agency has been hired to guard all the exits to the Carlson Library.

Ice reported that within the last two years, over 800 books have been stolen from the library. In order to eliminate this embarrassing situation, (and also keep his job) he felt that there was no other alternative but to go to these extremes.

The head librarian said, "since the last issue of the Scribe and their expose of the library's difficult situation, pressure has been brought upon me and the rest of my staff to go all out and eliminate this most unfortunate predicament."

(Editor's note: The Scribe was the University's official student weekly newspaper until two weeks ago when it was banished from the campus for printing derogatory stories about fraternities, Student Council and the administration.)

Ice stated that if the book stealing continues he will place x-ray machines at every exit so that everyone entering and leaving will disclose anything they happen to be carrying.

Ice concluded by saying, if the detectives and the x-ray fail to bring the book-stealing culprits to justice, he would resort to TV cameras, radar and even wire tapping. "It isn't that I don't trust the students," he said, "it's just that my job is in jeopardy."

Fulgencia Baptista, former President of Cuba, will deliver the annual Jacoby Lecture, Friday, April 3 in the Gym.

The deposed president, now in exile in the Dominican Republic, sent his acceptance to University officials last week.

Mr. Baptista, who has gained an international reputation as a humanitarian, will give his lecture on brotherhood for all University students, faculty, administration and guests.

Former U.S. President Harry S. Truman, who was originally scheduled to give the Jacoby Lecture last month, had to cancel out because of his heavy schedule.

The deposed Cuban president comes to the University as a prime example of brotherhood to his fellow man. His crusade for the rights of his countrymen in freedom of the press, religion, and from fear and a democratic government was responsible for eliminating the corruption in his country.

A man who is strictly against gambling of any kind, Mr. Baptista showed the rest of the world how a model democratic government should be run. It was only through the narrow-mindedness of a few individuals that he was overthrown by a mob of bearded slabs wearing fatigue hats and carrying machine guns.

Mr. Baptista's replacement in the Cuban government is now involved in stiff competition with the former President for the most executions in the least number of days. It will take him a long time to catch up with Baptista's record. When this University gets a man to deliver a Jacoby Lecture, he is one not to be outdone by anyone.

Mr. Baptista's speech will be entitled, "Rioting, Cuba's National Sport."

University officials received Mr. Baptista's acceptance to give the lecture last Thursday at 3:30 p.m. They had asked him at 11:30 that morning. Pres. Halsey stated that the University is honored to have such a distinguished personality to give the lecture. He said that he hopes ALL the students will show their appreciation by attending.

In mailing his acceptance to the University, Mr. Baptista stated that rather than receive the large amount of money that is given a Jacoby lecturer, that he would request one favor in return. That all students who have not shaven for at least one week or have any kind of beard at all either attend the lecture clean shaven or don't bother to come at all. Because of his recent embarrassing experience in Cuba, Mr. Baptista has acquired an extreme dislike for hairy faces. In his reply to the University's invitation to give the Jacoby lecture, Mr. Baptista concluded his letter of acceptance by writing "Beards bug me."

Mattson Gets Nobel Award

Dave Mattson, a freshman majoring in yellow journalism, has been awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature. He received the award for his front page expose on the Student Council which appeared in a recent issue of the Scribe.

The Nobel award for Literature is presented annually to the writer who best represents the ideals of journalistic sensationalism. The award, which is in a gift of $17.29, is given in honor of Sammy Nobel, who invented smudgeless paper for ball point pens.

Dave (smug smiles) Mattson, who writes part time for the Bridgeport Scratch and Scandle Sheet, stated that his story on the Council was the result of research that included wire tapping, bribing, blackmailing, and intensive interrogation before the Congressional sub-committee on rackets investigation.

B. B. Signed to Teach Anatomy by Braille

Bridgitta Bardosi, a junior exchange student from Naples whose major is anatomy, has been awarded a work scholarship as an instructor in anatomy and physiology. According to Dr. Everett Dolan Spiltoir, Miss Bardosi has a unique method of conducting class. The Prof. also hinted that the anatomy mannequins will soon be up for auction.

The daughter of a wine merchant, Bridgitta spent a drunken childhood extracting the grapes, tasting the batches and hauling her father's produce to market. She also had a part-time job singing in night clubs. After a few "pressing" years of this type of existence, she entered Lasagna University where her major interest became apparent. It was here that Bridgitta (48-19-48) learned that God also created men!

After her marriage to an Italian racing driver and his subsequent crack-up, she joined the mafia for a four year hitch as battalion psychologist. After receiving her dishonorable discharge, she decided to attend school while her GI bill was still in effect. She found it rough getting by on her looks and veterans benefits. Miss 48-19-48 took on an extra job as a bookie at the local race track.

In her junior year, she was accepted at the University as an exchange student. (She was exchanged for the author of "Beside Park Place," Don Piller.)

UB to Launch Space Vehicle Into Orbit

In commemoration of the completion of the foundation for the new science building, the College of Engineering will launch a four ton rocket into orbit tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. The launching pad will be the parking lot in back of the technology building.

The name of the new rocket is BERGPETE IV in honor of Dean William P. Berggren and Prof. Andrew I. Peterson of the College of Engineering who spent the entire Easter vacation working on the project.

Bob Moran, a freshman majoring in aerodynamics said in an interview with the Bribe this morning that a student will be locked in the nose cone of the space vehicle when it is sent aloft tomorrow afternoon. He said it is the student's initiation as a pledge into the Engineering Society.

The BERGPETE IV, which is expected to orbit the earth for three weeks, will be kept in radio contact by a special receiver located in the attic of Alumni Hall. The satellite's "beeps" will be heard over a public address system in the cafeteria.

President Halsey will pull the lever at the control station to launch the artificial moon. Vice-President Littlefield will give the count-down.

Spiritual advisors of the campus religious organizations will give a combined last rights to the dedicated student in the nose cone.

Prince to Enroll in Fall

Prince Charles of England is coming to the University on a work scholarship.

It was announced by the Royal Family that the Prince, who is a child prodigy with an IQ of 140, will major in Biology.

His father, Prince Philip, picked the University for his son because he was once a student of President Halsey when he taught at a private school in Greece 27 years ago.

The Prince, who is also an accomplished drummer, is expected to sign up for the University band and jazz workshop. In his letter to Mr. Raymond Stewart, instructor in music, Prince Charles expressed his fond desire to play in a typical American college band. Stewart said that he would have to audition him first. He said, "just because he's a blue blood I'm not going to show any partiality. He'll wait in line with the other commoners."

Pretty Seaside Park Offers Rare Collection

SEASIDE PARK — I arrived here at this beautiful seaside resort last week by way of what is known as Lung Island Sound. The immediate reaction one has upon docking near the beautiful sandy beaches is an atmosphere of peace and serenity. For a moment, I had a feeling that the beautiful homes, white sands, magnificent green grass and many lakes constituted a near Paradise. However, this feeling disappeared after closer inspection of the area.

My assistants and I began our tour near a statue of some fellow who was obviously held in high esteem by the local natives but whose identity we were unable to determine. Just beyond this structure we came across a group of unshaven creatures who explained to us that they were candidates for the Seaside University baseball team. One rather squat fellow with long arms and, in the interests of true reporting, a rather homely face, took us to his leader. This chap seemed quite normal, despite his somewhat bedraggled outfit. He told us that the park was a part of Seaside U. campus and that the center of the school was only a short walk from there. He pointed out a building not too far away which he said was the student gathering place.

Anxious to meet the students who inhabited this paradise, we began walking toward this building which carried a huge neon sign entitled SEAWALL. On the way, we passed a group of what we assumed were graduate students busy playing cards. Each had a bottle of wine and were dressed in much the same manner, — drab overcoat and crumpled soft hat. These gentlemen virtually ignored us as we passed by.

We passed several parked cars all of which seemed to be empty, until upon closer inspection, we realized that they were filled with couples obviously involved in some sort of pleasant exercise. One couple became highly infuriated when approached by one of my assistants. In fact, he told my friend to "Drag his something or other," before he called "Dr. Bear" or something like that. Fearing an uprising, we decided to move on.

Upon reaching the student center, we were greeted with noisy laughter and an occasional scream. Entering the building, we found scores of students hovering around a bar listening to a bearded, heavy and mean looking fellow. This fellow seemed to be in charge of the establishment. Another rather bald chap with an apron was busy nailing a sign on the wall which read, "Every Other Four Millionth Beer is on Nails."

IMA MANNEQUIN ELECTED BRIBE EDITOR

by Mush Horowitz

Ima Mannequin, a graduate student in the Arnold College of Miss Mannequin gets advise on correct campus dress.

Physical Education, was recently appointed Night Sports Editor of the Bribe. Selected by the Bribe Advisory Board, she was chosen immediately after her material was looked over by Editor-in-chief Izzy O'Tool.

A bashful girl with blazing red hair, Miss Mannequin came to the University after receiving a B.S. degree in Kinesiology from the Colorado School of Mines.

When the new night sports editor arrived on campus last week, she reported to Dr. Field that she would like to be the pitcher on Coach Despirito's baseball team because of her terrific curves. After giving her a slow once over, Dr. Field asked her if she had any other contributions toward the University. When Miss Manniquen informed the good doctor of her writing ability, he picked up his phone and put a direct call to the editor of the Bribe.

After hearing Dr. Field's descriptive qualifications of the new graduate student (36-24-36), Editor O'Tool requested her presence immediately for an interview.

As she pulled into the Bribe's parking lot, campus cop Elmer Maher quickly pulled up beside Miss Mannequin and asked for her credentials. After eyeing her over about 12 or 13 times, Maher let her go but advised her that the University was cracking down on campus dress and she should change her dirty sneakers.

Although some of the more reserved members of the student body feel that she goes around somewhat scantily attired, Miss Mannequin feels that she has a greater feeling of freedom for journalistic expression this way. She doesn't know how a girl can write a story and give all the facts if she's covering up all the time.

Talking to someone who takes a journalistic creed to heart like Miss Mannequin does is encouraging to any writer. When asked how she writes a story, she replied, "I think a story should be told straight from the shoulder, I don't believe in throwing curves around. I'm always happy to cover anything that I'm asked to, except me."

It isn't too often that the University gets a student from the west and we were curious about her acceptance on campus. "Well I honestly think I've been accepted here alright because I get asked to all the fraternity parties. Sometimes I have a feeling some of the girls are giving me the 'cold shoulder' but I guess it's really this New England climate."

Miss Mannequin, who was chosen scandal queen last fall at CSM, finds life at the University one of her happiest experiences. However, she is the first to admit that she has a couple of pet peeves. "First of all, somebody should do something about the chilly classrooms. Last Friday I had to wear a scarf all through my morning classes. And that isn't all; I have had some pretty dreadful experiences with the splintery classroom chairs here too."

The former scandal queen, who is enrolled in Prof. Jacobson's journalism 202 course, is looking forward to a bright future as a career girl. "I have always gotten along so well with my bosses that I've been tempted to go into public relations work after I finish my journalism requirements. I might also become a professional photographer because the people at the Bribe said I would spend a minimum of four semesters in the dark room. Editor O'Tool is always asking me into the dark room to see what develops."

THE BRIBE'S new night sports editor, Miss Mannequin, is always on the job covering her assignment.

Miss Mongoloid Voted '59 Grubney

Last week at the annual Theta Sigma Grubney Blast, the brothers of the black and gold offered Miss Sylvannia Mongoloid to be their Springtime Queen. Miss Mongoloid, or "Poochie" to her friends, nosed out a fine pack of females (?) to bust her way through the tape measure with the following vote tallies: 39½ 38½ 36½, were the tallies as recorded by king of the antlered reindeer, Dick Right. "Poochie" was crowned by last year's winner, Zelda Hutin Krutchin, an import from Siberia.

The judges: General (Ret. U. S.A.) Lottabull, History Department; J. Edgar Hoover, friend of T.W. DESierra of the Poli. Sci. crime labs at the University; and Sigmond Young of the Psych. Dept., unanimously voted "Poochie" as Queen Grubney, presenting her with a big hand as there was a limited audience available to produce sufficient applause.

Those "also rans" were: Ada Fellow, Malissa Trumpet, Jane VonSweezlet, and Michael Hugers.

Sylvannia's background is of staggering importance in her gaining the "Miss Grubney" title of this year. Born in the Nickofftyme section of the Upper Province of Lower Slurpupia, U.S.S.R., "Poochie" began winning beauty contests during her early adolescence. In her humble village there were 200 inhabitants of which 199 were male, the remaining being the captivating Sylvannia, perpetual contest winner. The townspeople were quick to sense her charms, and prowess at gathering votes, therefore, they petitioned the Mayor, Bovinski Herlivay, requesting that "Poochie" represent the village at larger contests.

Sweetheart of Theta Sigma

Her career then started and she was placed under the left wing of Marinoff Lotch-Hunn, ex-queen of them all, and contest groomer from way back.

Hats-off, to Sylvannia Mongoloid and her stairway to fame and rise to stardom in the eyes of the South End of Water Street which she has so commendably won for herself as supporters.

Tuitions Raised, Vets Take the Pipe!

Along Water Street

by Whole Phyller

The students who went home for the Easter vacation missed out on the biggest and the longest series of blasts this University has ever witnessed. Four of the local secondary groups for men received permission from the administration to be national fraternities, immediately after the wheels made the announcement, the place went berserk and hit the panic button.

The blast SLX through at their newly acquired frat house will go down in the annals of UB history. When Prexy Ed Clark got the word, he ran over to President Halsey's office with the $21,000 that was in the SLX treasury, threw it on the table, and signed on the dotted line for the purchase of Schiott Hall. The party that immediately followed went on for eight days and six nights.

With their advisor, Nick Panuzio, tending bar and Fred Pike running as courier to and from the local package stores, the inventory at the end of the week showed: four cases of VO, two cases of scotch, seven kegs of beer, nine cases of gin, and two bottles of ginger-ale.

The cops were called in to break up a fight between Dick Lifton and Jack Farrell when they found out they had both pinned the same girl. Jerry Schwartz paid the cops off with two bottles of VO and the blast continued.

Former Schiott residence counselor, Mrs. Lewis and now Lambda Chi House roomer, entertained the boys with selections from the opera Carmen.

AGP's party was carried on in a more gentleman like manner. A tea was held Sunday afternoon for the wives and sweethearts. At night a cocktail party was held for the brothers, (one apiece). Mrs. Kondratovich entertained the crew playing selections from Chopin. Don Scott did card tricks; George Dieter recited poetry; Joe Communale flexed his muscles; Darulla posed in a bathing suit; Al Audsley gave cha-cha lessons; Tracy Smith got an extra highball (he's president) and George Devon told war stories. The highlight of the evening was the singing of "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny" by Tom Thompson, Red Springer, Bob Stump, Charley Carchida, and Mike Fettig. (Very dull; no booze, no broads, no fights.)

The OSR party was not quite as loud as SLX's and not quite as dull as AGP's. It was held in Advisor Bill DeSiero's apartment at the Campus Gardens. The boys were limited because of room space, but they did manage to consume a considerable amount of booze. Joe O'Brien drank his usual two beers and got loaded. Mickey Donahue tried to jump out of a seven story window but lost his nerve when Dick O'Grady told him to wait until after graduation. Times are so rough now, you can't even get into heaven without a college degree.

The highlight of the party was the announcement by Duke Shepard of his pinning to Barbara Root of West Haven.

The SOS party was held in Trumbull Hall at the residence of Advisor Al Sherman. Roman Violyn started it off with a toast in honor of their going national. Sid Kohn announced his engagement to Mary Kelly, a freshman from the College of New Rochelle. Art Altman announced his de-pinning to Ina Marx. Mal Wolfe took pictures while Ray Menckez, Dave Hoffman, and Myron Gwirtzman were throwing down straight shots.

Party crashers Ron Miller and Andre Guilbert of local TS broke in and made off with six cases of VO for their own party.

Fights Highlight Co-ed Football

by Ed the Wolf-Man

The "Dowsy"—symbol of Northeast Girls College Football supremacy passed to Chaffee Hall on a windy Wednesday morning last week. In a fiercely fought game, biting and scratching all the way, the Chaffee clobberers mauled their way to supremacy over the Wisteria Creepers, 28-14.

From the beginning, there were no holds barred between these ancient rivals. Eye gouging, hair pulling, teeth knocking and rump kicking, were the order of the game from the moment the whistle blew in old Seaside-Park-by-the-Waves. "Fuster" Doris Carroll of the Wisterias led off with a 10 yard dropkick which had the Chaffeites scrambling. A fumble was quickly recovered by Maris "Toots" Greenberg who raced 110 yards to a touchdown against the strong running defense staged by the Weepers. Toots raced 10 yards, rearward, toward her own goal, when she realized her error, countermarched, strong-armed several over ambitious Wisterites and triumphantly raced towards the goal line followed by 11 weeping Wisterias.

Frustrated at this touchdown, the "Weepers" huddled together and gave their famous chant, "Wist-Weep-Weep... Victory! Victory! Tweet-Tweet-Tweet." And so emboldened, the "Weepers" marched the ball down the field in successive runbacks, led by Capt. Sue "Goose" Herman, to the 10 yard line of the "Clobberers." There the "Clobberers" stiffened and held for four successive downs, until the "Weepers" fell into a faint crying, "It ain't fair—it ain't fair." Thereupon, a hair pulling match ensued in which lovely Cindy "Topper" Gelbard's transformation came off, revealing a growth of carrot-red hair, artificially concealed under a mess of curls.

The "Weepers" cried out "Unfair! Unfair!—Skeets!" at this and asked for a forfeit as Tooty had been playing under a false topography. By the time Referee Claire "Boom-Boom" Fulcher stepped into the commotion, hard words were exchanged, the ground stomped in vexation and a liberal supply of unladylike terms exchanged, each one reflecting on the legitimacy of the recipient.

The stands went wild at this and the boy friends of the respective players made threatening gestures in each other's direction. In the middle of this, a cry of "foul" was heard and a hasty undressing took place on the field. There, unmasked in his full shame, was found a member of SOB, Bob "Honey" Vielyn, concealed in girl's football clothing—a ringer quarterback for Chaffee.

Nothing daunted, the "Clobberers" made a substitution and with Maris "Toots" Greenberg and Cindy "Topsy" Gelbard leading the attack, drove to a victory over the "Weepers" and thus clinched the Northeast Girls' Football championship and with it, the possession of the "Dowsy" for another year until April 1.

UB Unfolds Secret Weapon

DiSpirito Signs Mantle

by Edmundo El Lobo

Mickey Mantle, ex-centerfielder of the N.Y. Yankees, last week accepted a partial scholarship to play baseball for UB. Coach Robert I. DiSpirito stated that Mantle would have to prove himself before he gets the job as ball boy.

When interviewed, Mickey expressed himself as very elated over the offer and quickly accepted the terms. In an interview down at Sea Side Park, Mantle said, "I want to thank Bob for giving me this chance and I only hope I can prove myself to his satisfaction." Mantle is due to report on April 4, the day of the Purple Knights' opening game against the "Batista Followers."

If Mantle does well, DiSpirito revealed, UB has under consideration the buying of Bill "Moose" Skowron, also an ex-N. Y. Yankee ball player. Skowron would fill in the job vacated by Frannie Poison, as head cook and bottle washer.

"Master Mickey" as he is called by his friends, intends to live in the locker room of the Gym, where he can spend his time in deep meditation and concentration. He is famous for his deep trends of thought and his polite mannerisms on or off the field. Being cooped up in the locker room would also give the "Mick" a great chance to prepare for each ensuing game. Mantle would be able to rub up the baseballs, clean the spikes and polish the bats for each game.

Marble Tournery Called

by Lupus Lupo Wolf

Howland Hall was the scene of the most strenuous athletic event of the year last Tuesday, when the Seaside Slicers met the Knuckle Crackers in the hard contested finals of the Bridgeport Marble Tournament of the year. Led by their respective captains, Stan "Knuckles" Polack and Elliott "Puree" Mininberg, the two rivals battled each other to an exhausting finish, the game being called by the referee at the approach of darkness. During the game several spectators fainted with excitement and had to be revived by injections of adrenalin, cocaine, eau de fleur and Ballantine beer.

The game opened with a flashy display of knuckle technique in which Stan raced thru a series of Purees into a labyrinth of trapeze formations and skillfully treaded his way to a score of 14 Lovebirds.

Nothing daunted, Elliott "Puree" Mininberg followed up with a dazzling display of pyrotechnics which had the spectators gasping as he shot, cribbed, gamped and torted until the score was even at 14 Skeet.

The spectators gasped with excitement and tension mounted as Phil "Finesse" Organ followed up Captain Pollack, lovingly shooting each miggles down the hatch into the boondock. But when Steve "Bowler" Eisenberg coolly followed through with a calm splicing of the mainbrace, the excitement knew no bounds.

In the midst of the game, a small panic was engendered by Dr. Alfred Wolff who came into his office looking for an old Meerscham pipe and found the room jumping full blast. Nothing daunted, Dr. Wolff ascertained that no permission had been granted for the use of his office, sat down and granted permission forthwith, placing a ten cent bet, also, on the Knuckle-dusters.

Thus emboldened, the Knuckle-dusters spurted and it was only with an effort, abetted by an emergency telegram, surreptitiously sent by Dr. Halsey, that they pulled up even. Night alone brought an even division of honors between the foes and witnessed the final wrecking of Dr. Wolff's quarters.

The following morning when Bill Nowlan arrived at Dr. Wolff's office to repair the broken furniture he found both the team captains were still at it. P. S. — The Meerscham was never found.

Arnold Gives Big Panorama

The first Arnold College panorama will be presented Friday, April 3 at 7:30 p. m. in the Gym. The panorama will give the public a visual representation of a portion of the training that is required of students who are majoring in health, physical education and recreation.

Various forms of square, folk and modern dancing will be exhibited by members of the junior class, under the direction of Prof. Catherine Yocum of the physical education department. Gymnastics will be demonstrated by the freshman class. This work will include stunts on the trampoline, vaulting, pyramids, tumbling and rope skipping. Miss Sara Pellegrino, instructor in physical education, has taught the Arnold freshmen girls marching maneuvers, which will open the evening's activities.

Students in the swimming class of Prof. Walter Kondratovich will demonstrate the newer forms of artificial respiration. Members of his first aid and safety class will administer aid to students in a simulated accident.

Malcolm Schuldiner, of the junior class, will give a demonstration of posing that won him the title of "Mr. UB" last year. The program will close with living statuary athletic poses by men painted in silver.

Votes Pour in for Science Honor Wall

Ballots from throughout the United States are being returned to the University with nominations for the University's Science Wall of Honor, according to James H. Halsey, president.

"The returns reflect a widespread interest in the University's plan to perpetuate the names of 25 of the world's 'Immortals of Science,'" Dr. Halsey observed.

The names of scientists selected will be carved into the limestone walls of the University $1,400,000 Charles A. Dana Hall of Science, now under construction. Completion of the laboratory and classroom building is scheduled for January, 1960.

ADVISOR-ADVISEE MEETING

There will be an advisor advisee meeting, Wednesday, April 8, at 1 p. m., which all students are required to attend. Locations of meeting places will be posted on the bulletin board.
